

Full-time Faculty Workload Policy for School of Criminology and Criminal Justice College of Social Sciences and Humanities

Approved by the Department 10/6/2024

Approved by the Dean 2/21/2026

Approved by the Provost March 16, 2026

The School of Criminology and Criminal Justice prepares students for professional and research careers in criminology, criminal justice, and related fields by applying multidisciplinary and comparative social science theory and research to understand, predict, and explain crime and contribute to the development of public policy within urban communities. Using an active learning approach, the School also seeks to develop its students intellectually and ethically, while providing them with a full appreciation for the complexities of crime, and public and private efforts to make communities safer and ensure justice.

Faculty members within the School of Criminology and Criminal Justice are expected to teach, conduct research, and be involved actively in the governance of the School and University, while serving the profession and larger criminal justice community. While workload varies by faculty member, the following guidelines apply to faculty and administrative decisions.

As a general proposition, tenure track faculty members should devote 40% of their time to teaching, 40% to research/scholarship, and 20% to service. Teaching faculty should devote 80% of their time to teaching, 20% to service and professional development. Based on both the interests of the faculty member and the needs of the School, other distributions may be arranged by agreement of the faculty member and the Director and will be reflected in appointment contracts.

Being research-active means engaging in an ongoing program of scholarship, disseminating scholarly work in peer-reviewed journals or scholarly books, presenting at professional conferences, disseminating knowledge and engaging with academic and non-academic audiences and communities, actively seeking internal and external funding, and meaningfully engaging students in scholarship. Teaching includes the leading of courses and independent studies, as well as advising and mentoring students. Service activities within the university include committee work, advising student organizations, and involvement in roles that contribute to the School, College, and University. Service to the profession includes acting as a reviewer, editorial work, and serving as an elected officer or committee member within professional organizations. Service to the community may include providing pro bono advice to policymakers and community groups regarding criminal justice concerns. Faculty will work with the School Director to balance service commitments within the University and to the profession and the community. Faculty are expected to contribute to the professional development of disciplines by promoting the discovery and dissemination of knowledge in their fields through activities, such as participation in professional organizations, seminars, and colloquia relevant to the individuals' academic interests and teaching mission.

Appointments

According to the Faculty Handbook, the full-time teaching faculty of the University is composed of tenured and tenure-track faculty members as well as non-tenure-track faculty members. Specifically, tenured and tenure-track faculty members of the School of Criminology and Criminal Justice carry special responsibilities with respect to the creation and maintenance of high-quality research programs, and tenured faculty members with respect to supporting their tenured and tenure-track faculty colleagues in their progress towards tenure and/or promotion, as appropriate. Non-tenure-track faculty members are responsible for advancing the teaching, engagement, and service missions of the School and engaging in professional development to those ends. They also contribute to the governance of the School, the College, and the University. Each type of appointment carries a distinct workload effort that reflects the responsibilities and performance expectations of each faculty member. Percentages and ranges of assignments are approximate standards appropriate to the respective ranks and roles. Workload distribution adjustments not covered in the policy must be approved by the School Director in consultation with the College Dean.

Jointly appointed faculty members carry a primary obligation to the tenure-home unit and a secondary obligation to the non-tenure unit. The work effort of jointly appointed faculty members is proportional to the percentage of the appointment. The work effort of jointly appointed faculty reflects the expectations of the type of appointment (e.g., tenure-track, tenured, etc.). Work effort between the two academic units should total 100%. For joint appointments that are not evenly split, the relative responsibilities in teaching may need to rotate on a regular basis. The School Director and the other unit head will coordinate the details of these arrangements with one another and in consultation with the jointly appointed faculty member.

Full-time faculty members with a 50% or greater administrative load (e.g., School Director, Vice Provost, Associate Dean) are not covered in these guidelines.

All faculty with appointments of 25% or more in any department have voting rights in those departments commensurate with their rank.

Tenure-Track Faculty (Assistant Professors and Associate or Full Professors without Tenure)

Tenure-track faculty hold appointments as untenured, probationary members of the faculty. Tenure-track faculty members are expected to be research-active and develop and maintain a research program.

Tenure-track faculty members generally teach 4 courses over two semesters in fulfillment of 40% of their work effort. Teaching includes the leading of courses and independent studies, the advising and mentoring of students, and serving on thesis and dissertation committees.

Tenure-track faculty members are expected to engage in research and scholarship in fulfillment of 50% of their work effort.

Tenure-track faculty members are expected to engage in service activities in fulfillment of 10% of their work effort.

Tenured Faculty: Research Active (Associate or Full Professor with Tenure)

Tenured faculty members hold appointments with continuous tenure as members of the faculty. All members of the tenured faculty are expected to be research-active and maintain an ongoing commitment to the development of a research program.

Research-active tenured faculty members engage in teaching, including leading 4 courses; conducting independent and directed studies, advising and mentoring of graduate students, and serving on thesis and dissertation committees in fulfillment of 40% of their work effort.

Research-active tenured faculty members engage in research and scholarship in fulfillment of 40% of their work effort.

Research-active tenured faculty members engage in service and professional development activities in fulfillment of 20% of their work effort.

Research Inactive Status

A faculty member will be considered research inactive if he or she, over a period of the previous four calendar years, does not meet expectations for progress on peer-reviewed long-term research or scholarly projects, applications for appropriate external funding, and regular dissemination of scholarship, in appropriate peer-reviewed or public outlets.

The Director will make this determination on the basis of a consideration of four years of annual merit reviews and a review of the faculty member's up-to-date CV, and in consultation with the Associate Dean of Faculty Affairs and the Dean of the College. Annual merit reviews are conducted in accordance with the School's established policies and procedures. The ratings of scholarly performance as "far below expectations" in the last 4 annual merit review processes will serve as an indication of being research inactive. The Director will consult with the College Dean on a written improvement plan and possible reallocation of workload if the faculty member is determined to be research inactive. The Director will then meet with the faculty member and agree in writing with the faculty member and the College Dean on the improvements that need to be made. The Director will also indicate in this meeting and in a written improvement plan that if improvements are not successful by the end of the next academic year, the faculty member's workload will be reallocated. Tenured faculty members who are research-inactive will teach six courses per two semesters in fulfillment of 60%-70% of their work effort (depending on course type, class size, and availability of teaching assistant support) and take on an increased service load or 30%-40% of their workload.

Full-Time Non-Tenure-Track Teaching Professors (Assistant/Associate/Full Teaching Professor)

Full-time non-tenure-track teaching professors hold contractual, term appointments as members of the Teaching Faculty.

Full-time non-tenure-track teaching faculty members engage in teaching, including leading 6 courses as well as independent studies, advising and mentoring students, in fulfillment of 60%-70% of their work effort (depending on course type, class size, and availability of teaching assistant support). Full-time non-tenure-track faculty members are expected to engage in service and professional development activities in fulfillment of 30%-40% of their work effort.

Full-time Professors of the Practice and Distinguished Professors of the Practice Appointed in Faculty Positions

These positions carry a teaching load based on the four course standard and engage in research, scholarship, external engagement, and service activities unless other arrangements are made with the School Director and College Dean.

Full-time Professors of the Practice appointed in faculty positions engage in teaching, including leading 4 courses and independent studies, as well as advising and mentoring students, in fulfillment of 40% of their work effort.

Full-time Professors of the Practice appointed in faculty positions engage in research, scholarship, creative or external engagement activities in fulfillment of 40% of their work effort.

Full-time Professors of the Practice appointed in faculty positions engage in service and professional development activities in fulfillment of 20% of their work effort.

Accessibility Information

This workload policy and the model of each full-time faculty member can be found in the Governance Documents folder of the School of Criminology and Criminal Justice SharePoint site. The workload policy is also available on the website of the Senior Vice Provost for Academic Affairs. The School will review and ratify the workload policy and its documentation every five years and update posted materials as necessary. Any changes to the policy proposed on review must be approved by the School's faculty, the Dean, and the Provost.

Procedures

The two-semester workload assignment for an academic year for each individual full-time faculty member will be confirmed by the School Director in April. Overload activities should occur only after the 100% workload assignment is met. Variance in workloads will be addressed on a case-by-case basis in consultation with the Director and with the College Dean or designate. For faculty with joint appointments, the Director will meet with the other unit head at an appropriate point in time each year to coordinate workload expectations for the faculty member for the following academic year.

Typical modifications in workload include those granted by parental teaching relief, contractual course reductions for tenure-track or tenured faculty, family- and medical-related leaves, grant-funded buyouts, and administrative duties. Additional considerations for teaching assignments may include class size and type; mode of instruction; supervision of capstone projects; and Ph.D. and M.S. theses and dissertations advised to completion. The approval of the College Dean will be required for any modifications to a faculty member's workload by the School Director.

Faculty with requests for modifications of, or concerns about, workload should first address them with the School Director. If a faculty member is concerned about a workload assignment and cannot resolve the concern with the Director, he or she may appeal the assignment to the College Dean. If a faculty member continues to have unresolved concerns after the Dean has made a determination on the appeal, he or she should consult the Grievance Process as specified in the Faculty Handbook.

Research inactive faculty who wish to be once again considered as research active can request this at the point of annual merit review with the School Director. The decision on the request will be made in consultation with the College Dean.
